Course Description

This course will examine the significance of fear in shaping and organising everyday life. More than simply a psychological situation, we will develop an understanding of the complexity of fear and its relationship to social order and meaning. In particular, we will pay attention to the relationship between fear and identity formation (how we think of ourselves), as well as how we define and interact with others. We will also examine how fear is employed as a socio-political instrument.

We will start the course by establishing a history of the sociology of fear with emphasis on theories examining the relationship of fear to social modernity. We will look for instance, at theories that link fear with the rise of modern technologies, burgeoning city life and the growth of capital consumption at the turn of the century. Armed with these formative readings, we will proceed to look at more contemporary theoretical approaches to fear. Second, we will seek to understand how fear meets up with and informs aspects of social life and identity. Third, we will focus on case studies with an overall view to questioning how individuals and groups negotiate fear in various contexts.

Email policy

I am pleased to communicate through email for matters requiring brief responses. However, students should make use of my office hours and ask questions in class. I do not have access to email on weekends or evenings. I do not provide information about lectures or grades over email.

Students Services

Please refer to the STFX Academic Calendar for a full description of student services and supports.

Academic Integrity Policy

It is the responsibility of all students to become familiar with the academic integrity policy set out in the STFX academic calendar. Failure to do so does not exempt students from these regulations.

Laptops and cellular phones

Laptops and other technologies are welcomed in class, provided they are being employed for the purposes of note taking, or other activities directly related to class work. Checking social networking accounts during class is considered a disruption to other students. Cellular phones must be turned off during the class.

Late Work:

The deadlines for course work are firm. For all assignments, I deduct 2% per day up to 5 days (or 10%) at which point I will not longer accept the assignment for grading. Under no circumstances do I accept assignments by email.

Grading Scheme:

1. Critical Annotated Bibliography 30%
2. Final Paper : 40%
3. Presentations : 30% All students will present their paper proposals either by February 4th or 6th. There are no make up dates for presentations. Students must sign up in advance for one of these dates.

IF POSSIBLE, DOUBLE SIDE ALL YOUR ASSIGNMENTS!

1. Critical Annotated Bibliography (30%)

Approximate length: 5-6 pages

Due March 4th

Each student must select 3 academic articles with relevance to the course and provide annotated evaluations of each. These articles may be related by topic, but not necessarily so. Students will compose a carefully crafted annotated bibliography of these articles, in order to establish why these articles should be included in the course offerings. You must convince me of the effectiveness, applicability and relevance to the course. In your review of the articles, be sure to:

- a) provide a clear overview of the relevant content of the article;
- b) demonstrate that critical thought and careful organization went in to your examination of the article and its relevance to the course
- c) explain why these articles are complementary to a course on fear
- d) what are the strengths and/or weaknesses of the articles
- e) relate the articles to other themes in class and raise questions.

Be very careful not to simply describe the articles, but demonstrate your own ability to critically assess their pedagogic value for use in an upper level, sociological classroom on fear.

2. Presentation (30%)

Sign up for one of the two presentation dates : February 4th or 6th

Time allotment: approximately 10 minutes.

For this assignment, students will prepare a brief presentation of their final paper. For this presentation, please include the following:

- A. A description of your topic (see below under 'Final Paper' for options).
- B. A description of the topic, as it has been approached by others in sociology.
- C. The central theories, approach, concepts and terms you are considering using, and why.
- D. An outline of your paper. ***
- E. A bibliography (in ASA format only) of resources you will be using for your paper. ***
- F. Important questions that you are currently considering.

In order to complete the assignment, you must hand in both D and E to me on the day of your presentation.

3. Final Paper (40%)

Due: March 25th

10 pages

For this assignment, students will produce a paper tailored according to ASA formatting guidelines and dealing critically with one of the following sociological problems:

- A. Fear and age, sexuality, gender, race and/or class
- B. Fear and modern life
- C. Fear and film
- D. Psychiatry and the medicalization of fear
- E. Elite fear
- F. War, terror and the political uses of fear
- G. Fear of nature, fear of the city
- H. Pleasure and fear
- I. Pandemic and social contagion
